The Oklahoma Constitution is divided into 26 articles, each of which deals with a different aspect of state government. The first article, the Bill of Rights, is the most important part of the Constitution. It guarantees the basic rights of citizens, such as the right to freedom of speech, the right to bear arms, and the right to a fair trial.

The other articles of the Constitution deal with a wide range of topics, including the powers of the governor, the legislature, and the judiciary; the structure of state government; and the rights and responsibilities of citizens. The Constitution also includes a number of provisions that were added through amendments over the years. These amendments have addressed a variety of issues, such as the right to vote, the right to education, and the right to healthcare.

The Oklahoma Constitution is a living document that has been amended and updated over time to reflect the changing needs of the people of Oklahoma. It is a testament to the strength of our democracy and the importance of protecting the rights of citizens.

History of the Oklahoma Constitution

The Oklahoma Constitution was adopted in 1907, shortly after Oklahoma became a state. The Constitution was written by a constitutional convention that was elected by the people of Oklahoma. The convention was made up of 112 delegates, who represented all parts of the state. The convention met for several months to debate and draft the Constitution.

The Constitution was adopted by a vote of the people in 1907. It has been amended several times since then, but the basic framework of the Constitution remains the same.
