The report is based on the work of Human Rights Watch researchers around the world, who conducted hundreds of interviews with victims, witnesses, and human rights activists. The report also draws on a wide range of other sources, including government documents, journalistic accounts, and academic studies.

Key Events and Trends in Human Rights

The World Report 2024 highlights a number of key events and trends in human rights in 2024.

The Rise of Authoritarianism

One of the most significant trends in human rights in recent years has been the rise of authoritarianism. This trend continued in 2024, with a number of countries experiencing democratic backsliding.

In Hungary, for example, Prime Minister Viktor Orbán continued to consolidate his grip on power, eroding democratic institutions and restricting civil liberties. In the Philippines, President Rodrigo Duterte continued to wage a deadly war on drugs, which resulted in the extrajudicial killing of thousands of people.

The Erosion of Civil Liberties

Another key trend in human rights in 2024 was the erosion of civil liberties. This trend was particularly evident in countries where authoritarian leaders were in power.

In China, for example, the government continued to crack down on dissent, detaining and imprisoning hundreds of human rights activists and lawyers. In Russia, the government passed a series of laws restricting freedom of speech and assembly.

The Impact of Climate Change

Climate change continued to have a devastating impact on human rights in 2024. The year saw a number of extreme weather events, such as hurricanes, floods, and droughts, which displaced millions of people and caused widespread damage to infrastructure.

Climate change is also exacerbating existing human rights challenges, such as poverty, hunger, and disease. For example, the drought in the Horn of Africa led to a severe food crisis, which put millions of people at risk of starvation.

Challenges and Opportunities for Human Rights Defenders

The World Report 2024 also highlights the challenges and opportunities facing human rights defenders. On the one hand, human rights defenders are facing increasing repression from authoritarian governments.

In 2024, for example, human rights defenders in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, and Vietnam were subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention, and torture. In some cases, human rights defenders were even killed.

On the other hand, human rights defenders are also finding new ways to advocate for their causes. In 2024, for example, the #MeToo movement continued to gain momentum, empowering survivors of sexual assault to speak out and demand justice.

The World Report 2024 concludes that the state of human rights in the world is at a crossroads. Authoritarian governments are eroding civil liberties and cracking down on dissent, while climate change is exacerbating existing human rights challenges.

However, the report also highlights the resilience and determination of human rights defenders, who continue to fight for justice and human dignity. The report concludes that the future of human rights depends on the ability of human rights defenders to continue their work in the face of adversity.

The World Report 2024 is an essential resource for anyone interested in the state of human rights around the world. The report provides a comprehensive overview of the key events and trends in human rights, as well as the challenges and opportunities facing human rights defenders.

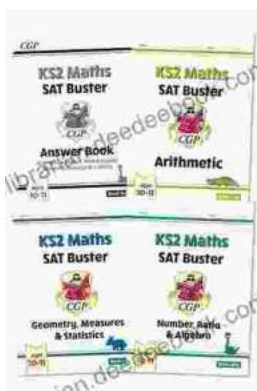

The report is a reminder that human rights are under attack in many parts of the world. However, the report also highlights the resilience and determination of human rights defenders, who continue to fight for justice and human dignity.
